entirely, thus adding to the appearance of the gatter.

By the old mode the gutter is enapended by having a strip of the banded around it and nalled to the building. Soon the nails get rusty, and the band slips off. The wind operating on the gutter gradually turns it around and treist it about so as to make it useices. In proof of this look at the thousands of gutters hung by the old process.

Below is appended the settificates of Architects and Buildiers certifying to the superiority of Tanp's Patent Gutter Fastener:

We, the undersigned, Architects of Cleveland, having carefully examined into the moerits of the above mode of Hanging and putting up Gutters, are confident that it is superior to the old mode, and we cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it the public.
